Health Claims Forum

- Why are we here?
 - Current heart attack definition ‘of specified severity’ – Tn value since 2006
 - Protection Technical Committee
 - Subgroup - consistent approach with regards to heart attack claims where definitions are the same, despite changes in scale, introduction of hs Tn and change in timing and use

Health Claims Forum

- What's happening about the current MI definition?
 - Currently only affecting a small number of claims
 - Change needs consultation– include in the CI SoBP review due in under a year
 - Allows time for full consultation during 2013 building on the WG's work
 - Companies can change definitions sooner if they wish to
 - Would still need a solution for existing business.

Let's be consistent!

- WG has produced a reference paper
- To update claims philosophy to reflect changes in clinical practice in
- Doesn't change the contractual requirements of the terms and conditions

Association of British Insurers

Conclusion

- Important that the industry has a consistent approach with regards to heart attack claims where definitions are the same
- ABI feels there is no urgency to review the Heart Attack definition before the next SoBP review in 2014
 - At this point the issue is only affecting a very small number of claims
 - To change the definition now would require full consultation with all interested parties and would be in addition to the full review of the SoBP in less than a years time
 - Allows time for full consultation during 2013 with the full facts available
 - Companies can still change definitions sooner if they wish to
- The reference paper is to help insurers adjust claims philosophy to reflect the changes in clinical practice for heart attacks, rather than hard and fast rules
- Thank you to Dr Collinson, WG members and CMOs and to the HCF
