Assessing and Managing Medical Risk for Insurers

A unique blended learning course, designed to improve understanding of medical conditions and their implications on underwriting and claims processing.

Designed for

Underwriters, claims assessors, and managers, working in health and life insurance, with at least 3 years experience.

Aim

To provide delegates with knowledge and understanding about a range of medical conditions frequently encountered in medical underwriting and claims, and to improve and facilitate their risk assessing performance for these key medical conditions.

Benefits

This Cardiff University accredited course is designed to improve delegates understanding of specific medical conditions and the implications on medical underwriting and claims processing. This can lead to cost benefits due to quicker processing, a reduction in CMO referrals, and improved quality and customer service.

Delivery

The course will be provided using a blended learning approach. It will consist of pre-course study, including videos, accessed via a virtual learning environment, and two consecutive days of 'face to face' presentations and workshops for each topic.

The workshops will be highly practical, using real life examples and industry case studies to aid discussions focussed on underwriting and claims covering all lines of business including life, critical illness and income protection.

Duration: Online delivery, plus 2 days 'face to face'

Dates: 23 & 24 November 2011 ("face to face" session)

Trainer: Dr Nick Niven-Jenkins, plus practicing clinicians

Fee: £980

Content

The course will consider the following key medical topics:

- Cardiology
- Neurology
- Diabetes
- Mental Health

For each topic, the course will cover:

- symptoms,
- diagnosis,
- treatment,
- prognosis
- issues related to underwriting and claims
